INFANT MEALS

Infant Meals are an area that causes many providers to be deducted meals because they are so different from the requirements for older children. This month we are focusing on the most common problems in the hope that this will help you get paid for more meals!

Common Problems

Some of the most common problems with Infant Meal claims are:

❖ SOLID FOODS – Solid foods may start to be served when the infant is between 4 to 7 months, but it is not normally required.

PROBLEM: Once you start claiming Solid food on your menus, USDA requires that you MUST continue with Solid food to be reimbursed. Many times, when you are just starting to try serving Solid foods, you may switch between Formula only and adding Solid food for a few weeks before making the permanent change. If you claim for Solid food one day and then return to formula only afterwards, USDA requires the formula only meals to be disallowed from the date of the FIRST Solid food claimed.

SOLUTION: Do NOT begin to claim for Solid food until you have switched completely from Formula only.

❖ INFANT FOODS – Foods served to each infant must be written on the claim.

PROBLEM: If you have two infants in the same age bracket that are being fed the exact same meal, some providers will only write the food served with the first infant and then not write anything for the second. USDA requires that the second child's meal be disallowed if there is nothing written specifically for each infant.

SOLUTION: Write down the meal components for BOTH infants using the back of the page for the 2nd infant.

❖ PARENT SUPPLIED FORMULA – Parents may wish to supply a different type or brand of formula than what you provide. In such a case the parent is allowed to supply the formula.

PROBLEM: Some providers think that they are not able to claim for this meal since the provider is not the one supplying the formula.

SOLUTION: USDA allows you to claim for the meal even if the formula is being provided by the parent. Be sure to write down the infant on the claim form and include the formula as the component served.

REMINDER

When serving juice to Infants, it MUST be served in an infant cup ("Sippy-cup"), NOT in a bottle.
